Principal's Message

Dear Children,

As the school year comes to a close, our minds and hearts are filled to the brim. It's been a great year! Together we've learned much and shared experiences that will long remain with us in the years to come.

Last year, we focused on the trait of mindfulness in order to develop traits among you all such as empathy, focus and emotion regulation. Soon you are going to enter in a new academic session where a smooth opening to the new academic year will be ensured by setting the priorities to build upon the success of the school so that we can improve still further. Dear children, we should always seek to do better; to challenge ourselves, to set the highest standards and achieve our ambitious goals. We all have weaknesses in personality and competence. When left unaddressed, these weaknesses limit our potential for impact and significance. Discover them, recognize them and learn to overcome them. Take a few minutes and think about what you want to feel in the next year, what you want to accomplish and what types of people you want to encounter. Our past is a powerful teacher, the problem becomes when we hold tight to the people, experiences and pain. The lessons we learn when we give ourselves a break and sometime can lead to living a more confident and content life.

I also request your prayers for our class X and XII students who have already begun the Board Examinations.

I would like to look forward to welcoming you all back, refreshed for an exciting, new academic year.

Best Wishes & Blessings!!!

HEAD BOY MESSAGE

"The secret of success is to be ready when opportunities come" - Benjamin Disraeli

A warm greeting to all. I feel short of words to express my emotions, my gratitude for the opportunity I have received to express my experience as the head boy of the school. I extend my sincere thanks to my principal - Dr. Priti Ojha ma'am, teachers who inculcated such capabilities in me that I felt confident to be able to discharge my duties and responsibilities as the head boy.

Being in my first year at this institution I've got the opportunity to take the lead and to showcase and refine my skills. It has been a roller coaster ride with lots of twist and turns, ups and downs. A team is like a tool set, not only one tool can do all the jobs, but together it can. Therefore, I would also like to acknowledge the wonderful team assigned to me.

Being unbiased was challenging as sometimes my close friends used to create nuisance and break rules, but somehow I managed it well. I learnt a lot of life lessons, soft skills, organisational skills but above all handling and coming to an amicable decision in group activities.

I even got to interact with many chief guests – high professionals and successful in their own fields-, during functions and gatherings personally. I learnt a lot of things from those confabulations. It was a great opportunity to identify and tap the latent qualities in me. It made me more disciplined and widened the horizon of my thinking. I am eternally thankful to the school faculties and teachers for electing me as the head boy and granting this wonderful journey with numerous memories to me.

THANK YOU...

ASHISH KUMAR

The Four Seasons

The Spring brings in full colors,
Everywhere sweet smelling of flowers!
Then comes the hot summer,
Temperature makes people slimmer!
Quickly cools rainy season,
It's quite pleasing as people reason!
The icy winds and snow signal winter,
People put on their woolen and still they shiver!

Happiness

Always be happy, always wear a smile, not because life is full of reasons to smile but because your smile itself is a reason for many others to smile. ...

Poem

The Innermost Strength

In this little pool of water,
This force comes as a disaster...
Pushes me away,
And downs me through the pain...
A silent storm,
Stalks me through night...
Suffocating me all this while,
Chokes the strength out of sight,
And waits till you survive...
Pushes you back again,
Through the rift and depths...
Calling for some help,
Then leaves you beside...
Waits for the strength to pass by,
Crawl with all your might,
For its only your will
That will survive you through the darkest night.....

FACULTY COLUMN

IT'S OK FOR BOYS TO CRY

As I write this I recollect one of my experiences of accompanying grade 6 students on a school trip to the hills. During the journey it came across as quite a surprise to all of us when this young sixth grader boy suddenly started crying. I was the educator in charge for a group of 8 students and he was one among them. Some of my colleagues shared that this is not new; they said "This boy often gets quite sensitive". As I took on further inquiring into the whole thing I figured out his real emotions and got present to his sensitive, emotional, vulnerable and sad world.

Boys, from childhood itself are always discouraged to cry. They are simply not allowed to feel weak and shed off their tears to express pain. But the fact is that boys do cry, boys do feel a lot of emotions, they too get affected by different situations in their lives. Whether it is loss of a broken toy or losing a soccer match, sadness of being away from family in a hostel for long or fight with a sibling. They possess as much human tendencies as girls do. Boys in fact are much weaker in terms of handling their emotions, moreover society and the culture completely thwarts their basic desire to cry out loud. They only get to hear phrases like "Come on be a man, stop crying, boys don't cry". As a result boys resort to aggression, anger, abuse or alcoholism to let their heart out. Their suppressed emotions can often become a big cause of concern in the later years of their life when they are bombarded with the pressure to handle several responsibilities and not given the permission to even fail. The pressure of not failing often affects their health also as adults. It is indeed a torture for them to sometimes continue to remain strong when they are actually feeling weak, remain silent when they should talk about their fears and worries, struggle alone when they need loving and comforting guidance and arms to wrap them around.

What is important to understand is that it's not necessary if for ages something is being practiced, it cannot be changed. So, what is it that you as parents can start practicing and make an effort to alter your child's world? All these tips can very well be used even for your daughters, however for now we are focussing on bringing up male child.

1. From a young age, every time your child loses something for eg, a toy, a match or anything else and is feeling sad about it, talk to him. Don't ignore his emotion, help him in express himself. Let him know, IT'S OK TO CRY.
2. Use feeling cards and talk about feelings of others in stories or a movie or cartoon.
3. Simply start listening more to your child. Boys often open up more when they are being heard. They don't need your advice always; instead they yearn for your compassionate and patient listening.
4. Everyday towards the end of the day or any other time that works for you, sit with your child to have conversations about his life. It could be related to any academic pressure, fight with a close friend or any upsetting behaviour by peers
5. Make sure to talk to him about any regrets if he may have, it could be something he might have done or said that he is feeling bad about.

I was really keen to pen down these thoughts since I feel culturally women have a lot of options to express their feelings by gossiping with other female friends or just simply speaking to their sisters or mothers about it and that goes true even for children. Girls can cry openly and lighten up themselves but the same does not apply for boys. They don't even speak about their emotions with their male friends. So, let's just create a new paradigm shift in our ways of parenting and try making our boys emotionally healthy adults with the ability to create healthy relationships both with themselves and people of their lives.
